Brief Biography of Nominee (not to exceed 200 words)

Hairong Zheng received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Colorado in 2006, then joined the University of California, Davis, initially as a postdoctoral fellow, before advancing to the role of project scientist in the Department of Biomedical Engineering.

Dr. Zheng is an academician of the Chinese Academy of Sciences (CAS). He serves as the Vice President of the Chinese Society of Biomedical Engineering, Vice President of Nanjing University, Professor at the Shenzhen Institutes of Advanced Technology CAS, and Director of the National Key Laboratory of Medical Imaging Science and Technology. His research primarily focuses on medical imaging technologies and instrumentation systems, with particular emphasis on MRI and biomedical ultrasound. He led the team that successfully developed China's first 5.0 T ultra-high field human MRI system, which has been commercialized. Dr. Zheng has made significant contributions to medical imaging and advanced medical equipment technology. As the first author, he received the National Science and Technology Progress Award in 2020 and the National Technology Invention Award in 2017.

Since 2013, Dr. Zheng has served as an Associate Editor for IEEE Transactions on UFFC. He holds 150 patents and has published over 260 peer-reviewed journal articles, including in Nature Communications, Science Advances, and IEEE Transactions etc.

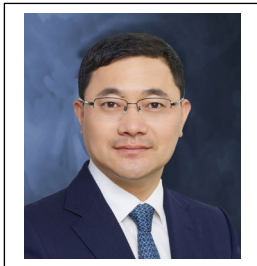

Nominee's Position Statement (not to exceed 200 words) (do not include CV)

IFMBE is dedicated to encouraging, supporting, representing, and uniting the global Medical and Biological Engineering community to promote health and improve quality of life. With one-fifth of the world's population, China plays a critical role as both a donor and a recipient. The Chinese Society of Biomedical Engineering (CSBME), with more than 6,400 registered members and a long-standing affiliation with IFMBE since 1986, has been a driving force in this mission. I am committed to continuing this effort and am eager to take on additional responsibilities to help IFMBE achieve its goals.

I have been working in Biomedical Engineering (BME) for over 18 years. Under my leadership, the research institution I head has become one of the largest BME research units in China.

Currently, I serve as Vice President of CSBME and as a key member of the National Committee for Strategic Planning in the Biomedical Engineering discipline. I have led several key initiatives that have significantly advanced support for research, education, training, and international collaboration in BME.

My professional experience in BME, global perspective, and administrative expertise make me a well-qualified candidate for this position.
